How to make a personal budget sheet in excel. How to make a monthly budget spreadsheet. How to make a personal financial spreadsheet. How to prepare a budget spreadsheet.

Because of this, it is easier to divide expenses into general categories. Announcement 3 Create cells for monthly income posting. In the cells below this, fill in different housing expenses that you have every month, such as mortgage payments or rent, utilities and insurance, using one cell for each expense. Financial costs: Credit card fees; check collection fees; bank charges; Other expenses. 2 Insert in column headings. Be sure to always close the brackets in the equation by adding a closing bracket mark. 7 Write to an equation to find the total monthly cash balance. Then, it is necessary to enter the expense in the same way as you put in income. After writing in all categories of expenditure, you need to create a cell that will sum them automatically. Write "Total Income" in this cell. Health; Health insurance; Co-pay; Medicine; Other healthcare costs. Then type a "-" and click the cell in column B that contains the total expense formula. Transport: Payments for auto loans; motor insurance; maintenance of cars; public transit costs; gases; parking/tolls; Other transport costs. In this column will be records the value of each other sheet item. If you receive an error message while entering the formula, an error occurred while writing the formula. In the cell directly to the right of this, it is necessary to enter the formula to find the difference between these two values. Then, click on the cell to the right of "Net Pay" and drag already to the cell to the right of your last cell of the income entry. This is an optional column to check whether invoices that are past due on dates in column C have been paid or not. Start by typing "=" sum (" in that cell. 5 Enter the expense titles. Go another other on the right, to D1, and write in "Paid" or something. Excel has many other functions that you can use to simplify calculations. This formula "A" the SUM formula. Alternatively, "A" you can type in the range of cells the first and last cells, separated by two points, in the SUM function. Here are some ideas for expenditure items and categories, in case you lose any: Housing; mortgage or rent; public services (energy, gas, water); Internet, cable, satellite; Insurance; Other (taxes, HELOC payments, etc.) Food: Grocery products; Eat out; Other food costs. 1 Open the spreadsheet you want. Personal/Family Expenses; Money sent to the family; Assistance to children; Day care; Garments/Shoes; Laundry; charitable donation; Entertainment; Other personal expenses. Again, "A" just type "=SUM(" and then click and drag down from the cell to the right of the first item in the shopping line and drag down the one to the right of the last item. However, if you receive a significant amount of income from another source (investment income, royalty income, etc.), you can include additional items for these types of income. This cell will calculate now the difference between the two.[5] For example, the equation could be similar to "=B5-B31". Just like you did for income, create a new cell under the last expense item and write in "Total expenses." In the cell directly to the right of this cell, enter the sum formula. Advertising When you've created cells for all your income types, you'll need one that totals your monthly income. Check again to make sure it matches the previous formula. 4 Create a cell for calculating total monthly income. Skip the first cell and enter "Amount" in cell B1. Create this cell in the next available cell The latest income entries (therefore, if you have only "net remuneration" and "other entries", this will be the A5 cell). Many different programs are available for free online if you don't already have a program like Microsoft Excel or Numbers installed on your computer. For example, your sum equation here may look like this: =SUM(B9:B30) . =SUM(B9:B30).
